

Amelie Jacobs und Tim Schönberger (Jahrgang 11, Helene-Lange-Schule Oldenburg)

Happy 50th!

Crazy! We have published 50 issues of the Handelsblatt Newcomer over the last ten years. But how is the newspaper produced? Allow us to explain...

Various people write the articles in the Handelsblatt Newcomer: editors from Handelsblatt, researchers from the Institute of Economic Education (IÖB) and the student editorial staff. The student editorial staff consists of 15 students from Helene-Lange-Schule in Oldenburg. As part of a working group, we meet once a month at the IÖB to develop topics and discuss the Newcomer that is currently in progress. We check whether the texts are easy to understand and contain the necessary information from the pupil's point of view.

A highlight of our editorial work is the annual visit to our big brother, the Handelsblatt in Düsseldorf. There, we have the chance to clarify general questions with our colleagues at the Handelsblatt and express our thoughts, wishes and critiques about the Handelsblatt

Newcomer.

During our last visit, we learned how the daily editions of the business newspaper are produced: from the first editorial meeting in the morning, planning the pages and layout to proofreading and sending the data to the printer. Together with the head of the online portal "Orange by Handelsblatt", we also considered how the portal could more effectively reach its target group - pupils and students.

All in all, we find the work as student editors very enriching and interesting. It allows us to develop a feel for topics as well as teamwork, planning and organizational skills.

Quelle: Handelsblatt Newcomer, Ausgabe 50, August-Oktober 2018